

Dance in the Park

Learn to dance contact improvisation with us

Every Wednesday evening in July. Free !

Keble Gate on Parks Road, meet here

Dance (and learn to dance), contact improvisation with us in University Parks, Oxford. All welcome. We're meeting 7.30pm at Keble Gate, University Parks (not the main gate!), at the intersection of Keble Road & Parks Road – see map above, to find a spot in the park. There's an optional introductory session or simply come to dance. No amplified music is allowed in the park but acoustic instruments welcome.

Contact improvisation is a dance which originated in the 1970's and which has now spread throughout the world. It's often taught in university dance courses but it's easy to learn and fun. It's an improvised dance - a dialogue in movement - which has a fluid and dynamic form, and it's social dancing; not stage dancing. Suitable for everyone, whatever your age, gender or dancing experience.
